EIGHT COUNTIES IN THIS DISTRICT

Sectional Headquarters for Inter-church World Movement Located in This City.

ACTIVE CAMPAIGN PLANNED

The Rev. Walfred Lindstrom in Supervision of Financial Drive—
M. N. Edgar County Leader.

Seymour has been designated as financial headquarters for the district composed of eight counties in this part of Indiana in the Inter-church World Movement. The Rev. Walfred Lindstrom, who was named district financial director, has his work under way after a week's of preliminary activity. Although he will travel throughout the district his offices will be located here. The eight counties in the district are: Clarke, Floyd, Jackson, Washington, Scott, Crawford, Harrison and Orange. Morris N. Edgar, of this city, has been appointed chairman of the Jackson county organization.

An important meeting relative to the work of the Interchurch World Movement was held in Indianapolis Friday. Mr. Lindstrom and Mr. Edgar, representing the Interchurch Movement, and the Rev. T. C. Smith, county director of the Baptist New World Movement, were in attendance. Mr. Lindstrom is arranging to conduct an active campaign throughout the district and will have the co-operation of the county chairman and the various ministers.

Some of the churches have already waged their financial drives and a part of the funds pledged at that time will be turned over to the Interchurch organization. The organization of which Mr. Lindstrom is in charge to wage a campaign among those who are not affiliated with any church organization.

Non-church members have been classified separately and the amounts that they give for this cause will be divided among the religious denominations on the basis that each actually raises. The Interchurch movement is one of the most tremendous undertakings ever attempted by the Protestant denominations. The movement is a joining of all forces which are striving for one single goal. In the past the home mission society, the foreign mission society, the church extension society and the various philanthropic and eleemosynary agencies of any denomination conducted their affairs independently of one another. Each surveyed its own restricted territory, prepared a budget of money and workers for its own purposes and made its own appeal to its constituency for support.

The Interchurch World Movement is simply a plan to do interdenominational what the forward movements have done within the various communions.

Its first goals are to reduce unnecessary duplication and overlapping to a minimum and to bring about an intelligence division of labor in unoccupied fields. The movement is, at bottom, an attempt to put church business on the sound, rock-bottom business-like foundations upon which the great commercial institutions of America are built.

HIGH WATERS ARE RECEDING RAPIDLY

White River Had Fallen Two Feet at Noon Today—Vehicles Crossing at Rockford.

White river is receding rapidly, according to reports from Rockford today. The water reached its highest stage early Friday night and at midnight it started to fall. At noon today the water had fallen two feet and according to rivermen it will be back to normal in a few days unless another hard downpour of rain comes.

The water was practically off of the road west of the Rockford bridge this afternoon. The road was about two feet under water Friday. Vehicles were crossing the bridge at Rockford today.

LOCAL MAN FINDS INTRUDER IN ROOM

M. E. Jennings Has Unusual Experience in Old Inn Hotel in Louisville.

RECOVERS $8 STOLEN MONEY

Chases Thief Down Hallways and Then, Releases Him When Hard Luck Story is Told.

Maurice E. Jennings, a representative of the Central Pharmaceutical Company, had an unusual experience in the Old Inn hotel at Louisville where he was a guest, early this morning when he awoke to find a young man going through his clothes in search of money. Mr. Jennings jumped out of bed and the thief started to run. The local man, not to be outdone, started after him and chased him down several flight of stairs and finally captured him by jumping over the banister on his back.

The young man, who was about eighteen years old, told a hard luck story, and Mr. Jennings consented to release him, after he recovered about $8 that had been taken from his clothes. Mr. Jennings then reported the matter to the hotel clerk, at which time he was informed that the hotel detectives had been looking for the boy for several hours. When Mr. Jennings left Louisville this morning city detectives were on the boy's trail. He was caught by a porter after being released by Mr. Jennings, trying to break into another room. The young thief has a bad police record in Louisville, it is said.

Mr. Jennings considers himself very fortunate in discovering the presence of the lad before he escaped inasmuch as he had several hundred dollars of the Central Pharmaceutical Company's money in his possession which he had collected on the trip together with his own purse which contained a substantial sum.

The $8 recovered from the boy was taken from Mr. Jennings' vest and the lad did not have time to go through the other pockets of his clothing before being discovered. Mr. Jennings returned to his home in this city this afternoon and is somewhat lame due to the chase he gave the thief early this morning.

SOUTHEASTERN WRECK PROVES RATHER COSTLY

Nine Cars Heavily Loaded With Stone Derailed—Crew Escapes Injury.

The Southeastern railway suffered another costly wreck at 5:40 yesterday evening one and one-half miles east of here near the Andy Younger home when the engine and nine cars heavily loaded with stone left the rails on Leatherwood hill. In addition to the cars wrecked four hundred feet of track was torn up. The train was in charge of Conductor Elliott and Engineer Bicknell. The engine crew stuck to the engine and escaped injury. The road is badly blocked and will not be cleared for resumption of traffic until some time late this afternoon or tonight. All passenger trains are transferring. The wrecker was called from Terre Haute and has been busy since its arrival here during last night. The wrecked train was the second section of No. 33 southbound.—Bedford Mail.

An informal canvass of the situation was made and those present reported the names of many Jackson county Republicans who favor Harding on first choice. Another meeting will be held next Thursday night.

RULING OF STATE BOARD

Commissioners Also Planning Reassessment of Real Estate Not Properly Appraised.

The household list which is a part of the new personal property schedule this year need not be filled out unless the property owner and the assessor fail to reach an understanding relative to the true cash value of such property, according to a new ruling by the state tax board. The tax commissioners hold that the household schedule was prepared to aid the assessor in arriving at a true cash value of such goods and may be omitted if that value can be obtained in any other way.

The ruling follows: "Some misapprehension has arisen in regard to the use of the supplemental lists of household goods and farm implements on the fourth page of the personal property schedule. All assessing officers are instructed that these lists are intended to assist the taxpayer and the assessing officer to arrive at the value of class-

WILSON'S COURSE IS NOW WATCHED

SENATE REFUSES TO RATIFY

Whatever Action is Taken is Expected to Result in Another Long Debate.

By United Press
Washington, March 20.—The treaty is now up to President Wilson. The senate washed its hands of the pact last night when by a vote of 49 to 35, it refused to ratify it and then voted to send it back to President Wilson with word that it could not be ratified. The question today was "what will Wilson do about it?"

He can send it back to the senate. In that case Lodge and other Republican leaders, as well as many Democrats, declared that no action whatever would be taken until the issue of treaty or no treaty had been fought out and decided in the campaign.

He can go to the American people in a referendum on the question of ratification as an issue in the national campaign of 1920.

He can drop the treaty and begin negotiations with Germany for restoration of the state of peace.

The general expectation among senators is that he will take the second course and ask the Democratic party to make the treaty the paramount issue in the campaign.

Whatever Wilson does about the treaty, it was generally agreed here today, that the country faces another long seige of treaty speech making which will be delivered from every stump in the land.

INDICTED COAL OPERATORS EXPECTED TO SURRENDER

Carl Fletcher, of Indianapolis, is First to Appear—Released on $10,000 Bond.

By United Press

Indianapolis, March 20.—Governments today expected those Indiana coal operators indicted by the federal grand jury to surrender as soon as capases for their arrests are prepared, rather than wait for the serving of papers. Carl Fletcher, of Indianapolis, secretary of the Knox County Coal Operators' Association, was the first of these to give himself up. He presented himself at the federal building yesterday and was given his liberty under $10,000 bond. Besides Fletcher 124 other operators and miners were indicted on charges of conspiracy to limit the production of coal in violation of the Lever Act and also on charges of defrauding the United States government.

Some of the leading miners expressed the belief today that all the miners and operators of the joint wage conference at Buffalo were indicted.

RADICALS CAUSE DISORDER IN MANY GERMAN CITIES

Efforts to Institute Soviet Government Cause of Disturbances in Essen and Ruhr District.

By United Press

Armed workers were reported to have captured Essen after two days' hard fighting. More than three hundred persons were reported to have been killed and many others wounded. Armed workmen were said to have occupied the greater part of Westphalia, including the Ruhr industrial district. Armed forces of radicals were also reported in control of several other sections.

NEWBERRY FOUND GUILTY BY JURY

United States Senator from Michigan Charged with Obtaining Election by Fraud.

VERDICT AGAINST 16 OTHERS

Defendants Alleged to Have Used Money in Violation of Corrupt Practices Act.

By United Press
Grand Rapids, Mich., March 20.—Truman H. Newberry, United States Senator from Michigan, was found guilty of fraud in obtaining his election in 1918, by a jury in the United States district court here today. The jury reported at 11:20 o'clock after deliberating since 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

The jurors found that Newberry conspired with associates to cause expenditures during the campaign of a sum of money in excess of the amount allowed under the corrupt practices act. Newberry was sentenced this afternoon to serve two years in federal prison.

Sixteen others were found guilty with Newberry. They were all leading defendants. The remainder of the eighty-five defendants were acquitted on the charge of conspiring to violate the corrupt practices act.

All the defendants were found not guilty on the sixth count of the indictment, charging conspiracy to use the United States mails to defraud.

Among the others found guilty were Paul King, of Detroit, who managed the Newberry campaign; Frederick Cody, of New York, legislative agent and Newberry's right hand man; Charles Floyd, Grand Rapids, manager for the Newberry campaign; Allen Templeton, head of the Detroit chamber of commerce; Hannibal Hopkins, publicity agent for the Newberry campaign, and John Newberry, brother of the senator who furnished $99,900 for the campaign.

Immediately after sentences are passed motions will be made for a new trial, defense attorneys said. The verdict was a great shock to those found guilty as they were expressing confidence of acquittal a few minutes before the jury report. Senator Newberry sat in a daze when his name was read among the guilty.

Newberry issued the following statement after his conviction by the jury:

"There is nothing in the jury's verdict that will cause me to hang my head. Until my conscience and the supreme court decides that I have wronged the people of Michigan, I will retain my seat in the United States senate."

MARSHALL WITHDRAWS

Democrats in State Without Presidential Candidate.

By United Press

Indianapolis, March 20.—William Elder, acting for Vice-President Marshall, today withdrew the petition asking that Marshall's name be placed on the presidential preferential ballot on the Democratic primary. Elder's action followed a similar move for the supporters of Governor Edwards, of New Jersey. This leaves no Democratic candidate in the field and assures the Indiana delegates to the Democratic convention will go uninstructed.

SPIES OLD AND NEW IN WARTIME

by Major Powell.

METHODS ARE MUCH CHANGED

Development of Secret Code Devices
Renders This Country Well Nigh Invulnerable in Event of Our Ever Becoming Involved in Another War—Has System of Code Transmission Which Can Defy All Experts in the World.

When Mme. Marie K. de Victorica, daughter of the Prussian general to whom Marshal Bazaine handed his sword in 1870 at the surrender of Metz, set out from the Wilhelmstrasse to conduct an espionage campaign in America during the recent war, two silk mufflers were an important part of her equipment.

Of her equipment, not of her wardrobe!

For the mufflers were impregnated with a secret ink chemical, so that when she saturated them in water and wrung them out she obtained the needed "invisible" fluid for her code messages to Germany. By dissolving in vinegar iodine tablets manufactured by British chemists, secret agents in Berlin set up the necessary reaction to make the writing visible.

Mme. de Victorica, you perceive, was an old-fashioned spy, a product and tool of old-world diplomacy and duplicity, the New York Times explains. So-called invisible ink is one of the oldest tricks of the trade. A close mouth is one of the personal requirements, too, and however well the madame may have been provided with silk mufflers, she was woefully deficient in vocal mufflers. She talked too much, and in consequence of her indiscreet boasting on the steamship which bore her to this country a watch was set on her which balked most of her spying and ultimately brought arrest.

Tricks of the Modern Spy.

The modern spy, as evolved from the world war, differed as widely from Mme. de Victorica and her secret ink as the Woolworth building differs from the Pyramids, to which time secret ink probably belongs. He used a code, to be sure, but it was the kind of code which would have robbed Edgar Allan Poe of a picturesque part of his reputation had it been in use in his day, for it was transmitted, not by ink but by electricity, and it was so ingenious that even the operator sending the message could not possibly decipher it.

That statement is made on the authority of Maj. E. Alexander Powell, who is entitled to write an imposing string of letters after his name, but who uses his military title in signing his latest book, "The Army Behind the Army," about to be published by Charles Scribner's Sons. He takes a casual and somewhat contemptuous glance at Mme. de Victorica and her ink, for he is much more interested in the unassuming and undisguised modern detective spy, partly because when he entered the war he was one of the four officers in the military intelligence division (the army secret service) and he cheats the censorship to the extent of telling some new facts about its work.

Mme. de Victorica, it may be said in passing, was a kinswoman of the Kaiserin, and had received a high education in German universities. She spoke four languages, had worked as a German spy and propagandist in South America and other countries and had been thrice married. Her last husband was a South American, who died suddenly soon after the marriage. Her first husband was Prof. Otto Eckmann of Heidelberg university. Her German title was the Baroness Maria Kretschmann. She used various aliases, among them Mlle. Marie de Vessiere, and Frau Maria Kretschmann.

Secret Code Devices.

Perhaps no revelation Major Powell makes is more interesting than that about the secret code devices. "I am not permitting myself to indulge in the slightest exaggeration," he writes, "when I assert that these devices place in the hands of the United States weapons which would render this country well nigh invulnerable in the event of our ever becoming involved in another war." And later he adds that "as universal peace is not yet in sight, even with the aid of a telescope, and as this invention would prove of incalculable benefit to the United States in the event of our becoming again involved in war, it is obviously out of the question to discuss the principle on which it is based, much less the details of its construction and operation. It is enough to say that this nation is now the possessor of a system of code transmission which can defy all the experts in the world, a message sent by its means being absolutely undecipherable by the inventor himself.

Possibly there is a clue to the secret in Major Powell's description of another invention, unsuccessfully tried out before the successful device was found by the American Telephone and Telegraph company. He says:

Confusing the Enemy.

"Another system had as its basis principle the breaking up of the group of Morse dots and dashes which represented the letters of the message, and sending these mangled fragments over widely separated wires to the receiving station, where they were automatically joined together again, so as to form the message as originally sent. If, for example, it was desired to send from Hoboken to Washington the message, 'Transport Leviathan sails June 25,' it was proposed to make use of two lines, one running, let us say, through Harrisburg, the other via Wilmington. The message sent over the Harrisburg wire would be broken up something after this fashion: 't-a-s-o-l-e-t-t-n-s-i-s-u-e-w-n-y-t.' While the portion going by way of Wilmington would read: 'r-n-p-r-l-v-a-h-n-a-l-j-n-t-e-t-f-f-h.'

"To create still further confusion in the mind of anyone who might succeed in intercepting one of these sets of fragments it was proposed to superimpose a 'camouflage' message upon the disconnected letters, the characters of the camouflage message to occupy the spaces between the characters of the real message. By an exceedingly ingenious device these apparently inextricably intermixed and unrelated letters were automatically sorted out at the receiving station and pieced together, like a jigsaw puzzle, so that the message appeared precisely as it was sent.

Utilizing the Telephone.

"Going a step further, the inventors of this system proposed by the same means to install a system of telephone communication whereby the spoken words would be broken up just as the Morse characters were divided, certain sounds in each word going over one wire and the remaining sounds over another, to be joined together at the receiving station into a perfectly intelligible conversation.

"Here again a wholly separate and extraneous conversation was superimposed over the sounds proceeding by each route, so that there was either of the lines tapped the listener-in would be rewarded for his pains by hearing a torrent of sound which would convince him that he was listening to a combination of Chortaw, Chinese, the ravings of John McCullough, and the symptoms of a severe cold. Notwithstanding the undeniable ingenuity of this system, the signal corps experts demonstrated to the unimpeachable astonishment of the inventors, that they could overhear and understand these crazy-built conversations as readily as though they were being held across a dinner table in plain English."

Products of American Ingenuity.

The successful device (which may, of course, use none of the principles involved in the system just outlined) is one of three evolved by Yankee ingenuity from the war which Major Powell regards as "the most important discoveries, so far as their effect on the peaceful interests of the nation are concerned, which have been produced since Morse invented the telephone and Marconi amazed us with the wireless." One of them is the radiotelephone, by means of which persons on the ground can converse with aviators; and the other is the discovery of Chief Signal Officer Squire that growing trees can be used as sending and receiving posts for radio messages.

Major Powell's book is devoted in the main to the man with the silver chevrons. He wrote it at the request of Secretary Baker and was retained in the service to complete it. Readers may be sure, therefore, that he had access to all necessary records; but there are moments when the heavy hand of a department head becomes apparent.

"The Ears of the Army."

In spite of that, he writes as one "on the inside." He tells of the 18 telephone and telegraph battalions recruited in large measure from the ranks of the two great telephone companies in this country (which may explain why it has been so hard to get "central.") These he calls "the ears of the army," but at times they also were its spies. He tells of the engineers, the gasmakers, the quartermaster and ordnance departments, the aviators, the tank corps, the motor transport corps, the medical department and, of course, military intelligence. He says, incidentally, that not one spy was shot here during the war.

It is Major Powell's contention that the motor transport had its beginning when Pershing went into Mexico after Villa; and at one place he throws this interesting sidelight on the submarine raids along the Atlantic coast:

America's Moving Fortresses.

"And, apropos of rolling stock, here is a bit of secret history hitherto unpublished. When Villa's raiders were threatening to destroy the railway lines paralleling the Mexican border the engineering corps designed and built a number of self-propelling armored railway cars armed with three-inch rifles, machine guns and searchlights. When the German submarines began their piratical operations along the Atlantic seaboard in the spring of 1918 these moving fortresses were secretly rushed up from the Rio Grande in order to afford protection to the undefended Jersey coast towns. It was well for the U-boat commanders that they did not attempt to shell Long Branch and Atlantic City as they shelled Scarborough and Broadstairs. If they had the engineers and their armored cars would have given them the surprise of their lives." America's effort in felling forests in France, building railroads there, producing superpoison gas and so on is more than a twice-told tale. Major Powell tells it with an interest as fresh as though he approached it for the first time, and frequently produces facts not hitherto known. This article is not an attempt to summarize all the new things he has had to say; it is, on the contrary, a poor foreshortening.

es of property that previously have been much neglected—especially when values have been considerable. "Heretofore in many sections of the state separate supplemental lists on cards have been used, but there has been no uniformity in same. It is provided this year that all shall deal with the subject alike to the end that there shall be equality of assessment with minimum of error, and that these items in the supplementary lists shall be used as a means to an end, and that these classes of property shall be returned as all other classes of property, at their true cash value.

"Assessing officers are required to take oath that they will assess all property at its true cash value and the responsibility of this work must be theirs. If the assessor agrees with the taxpayer and he is informed of the facts and knows the amount agreed upon to be the true cash value then he may use discretion, as the lists were prepared and intended to aid him and the taxpayer, but the responsibility of the assessor can not be waived under his oath, as it only permits such discretion as will enable him to ascertain the facts which should be known in order to make correct returns."

More than likely some real estate in this county will be reassessed this year. The tax board has ruled that where real estate was not properly appraised last year it may be reviewed this year.

It was explained by members of the board that under the workings of the true cash value system last year there were many instances of discriminatory assessments by local officials. Cases have been brought to the attention of the state board where adjoining pieces of land of virtually the same value were assessed at widely different figures. In some cases these assessments were accentuated by horizontal increases ordered on real estate.

The new rule for the reconsideration of real estate assessments provides that the taxpayer can appeal to the state board any time prior to May 1 for a reassessment of his property, provided a proper application is made; that any taxpayer can seek the reassessment of any real estate on application to the tax board prior to April 20; or that the county assessor, treasurer and auditor, or any two of these officials, may recommend to the state board prior to April 20 the reassessment of any real estate where it is necessary in "order to maintain an equitable and just valuation."

"Under its power to order a reassessment of real estate in any taxing unit or units or of any individual owning real estate, the state board of tax commissioners will receive applications from taxpayers for a reassessment of real estate at any time prior to the first day of May. An application for reassessment shall contain: (1) The description of the property; (2) the name of the taxing unit wherein it is located; (3) the assessed value; (4) the true cash value of same on March 1, of the current year; (5) waiver of the notice required by the provisions of Sec. 152 of "An Act Concerning Taxation," Approved March 11, 1919," and (6) the approval of the county assessor, county auditor and county treasurer, or any two of these officers of the county wherein such real estate is located. On receiving such application duly verified, if approved by the board, the board will order a re-assessment of the real estate to be made by the proper local assessing officer. Such officer shall assess the said real estate and notify the owner of the amount of the assessment made. Such taxpayer, if he is not satisfied, may appear before the county board of review at its regular session in June and make such objection as he may deem necessary.

"Any taxpayer desiring a reappraisal of any real estate where the assessed value of such real estate is less than its full true cash value, shall file an application similar to that herein provided, without a waiver of notice, not later than April 20. If approved by the board, notice shall thereafter be given and proceedings had as provided in said Sec. 152 of "An Act Concerning Taxation Approved March 11, 1919."

"The late board of tax commissioners will also receive recommendations of the three county officers herein mentioned, or any two of them, without the joining of any taxpayer in such recommendation, when it is shown by such officers that a reassessment of real estate is necessary in order to maintain an equitable and just valuation, but such recommendations shall be made not later than April 20, and if approved by the board, proceedings thereafter

Abraham's Test

By REV. B. B. SUTCLIFFE
Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT.—It came to pass after these things that God did tempt Abraham.—Gen. 22:1.

The record of Abraham offering Isaac found in the twenty-second chapter of Genesis is an illustration of James 1:12, where it is said "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation."

We must be careful to remember when thinking of God's dealing with Abraham that God can tempt no man to evil. It was a trial of Abraham's faith, but no temptation to evil. Three outstanding features of this test of faith are found in many of God's dealings with his people today.

First, it was wholly unexpected. It came "after these things." "These things" are the events of Abraham's life up to this point. They include his call and his separation from his country and his father's house; his experience with Lot and Sodom and the defeat of the kings; the promise that his family should increase and the experience with Hagar and Ishmael; the change of his name and the coming of the promised son Isaac. It looked to human sight as though his active life was over and he had but to rest quietly through the few years left on earth. It looked as though his life was complete. He may have been thinking as Job was when he said in Job 29:18, "I shall die in my nest." But we are reminded that perfection is never reached in this life, and therefore the training is never finished. No matter how far advanced in Christian experience, new lessons are to be learned and unexpected trials of our faith are to be looked for as long as we abide in the flesh.

Secondly, it was unexplained. God did not tell Abraham why he was putting this test upon him. Any explanation would have robbed the test of its value. If Abraham knew just why God asked him to offer up Isaac he would have seen what God saw and there could be no proper test of faith. We are continually asking "Why?" at every turn in God's dealings and are frequently in danger of disobeying God because he does not condescend to give us an answer to the "Why." We know that all things work together for good to those that love God, and this knowledge of the ultimate issue in good should make us more and more hesitant in questioning the motives of God's dealings with us. If we knew why things are as they are, or if things always went in a way we could explain, the trial of our faith, "which is precious," would lose all value.

In the third place, it was unreasonable, or so it would seem from the human viewpoint. Abraham was asked to offer up his son, Isaac. Now think who Isaac was and what he represented. God had declared that his promises would center in Isaac. If anything should happen to this boy what would become of the promises? How could God's word be fulfilled? If God was not true to his Word the whole foundation of faith would be destroyed and Abraham would be found to have followed a false voice. It must certainly have seemed to be unreasonable to Abraham, and very often God's dealings seem unreasonable to us. We are so often afraid, though perhaps we do not give the thought words, that God is making a mistake. In some loss of friend or relative, or in the taking away of some strong pillar of the church, we say one to another: "This is a great loss—this is irreparable." We act and talk as though in reality God was making a mistake because his dealings and providences seem unreasonable. But the event always proves the reasonableness of his actions and we find he has ways above our reason.

The action of Abraham under test holds an example for us. His obedience was prompt; no dragging of feet as he went to do the Lord's bidding. Putting off doing usually results in not doing at all. It was unquestioning. When questioning comes in, human reason usually triumphs over divine revelation. It was unstinted. Partial obedience gives God little chance of bestowing blessings.

The secret of Abraham's obedience is to be found, I think, in verse 12, where the Lord says: "Now I know that thou fearest God." Abraham's faith had received the promises and now his fear obeys the precepts. Not the servile fear of the criminal afraid of the vengeance of the broken law, but the godly reverence yielded to Jehovah leading to putting him in the supreme place of authority in the life. Abraham's fear which issued in obedience is the proof of Abraham's faith. As James puts it, "Faith without works is dead."

BUYING A MISSIONARY'S TIME

"Now I have paid up my pledge to the Presbyterian Church. When I think of how much I have made this year, what I gave wasn't much. I will do more next year."

"This plan of giving to the church a certain proportion, possibly a tenth, appeals to me. I am going to talk it over with my wife. The amount I gave last year figures out to a mighty small sum every week. But at that, the money I did pay bought a foreign missionary's time for a little while—for a few days at least he belonged to me."

"Friend, can't you give 50 cents a week?"

The Presbyterian Church year ends March 31. The board treasurers are endeavoring to have all accounts for every cause paid before the last week of March.

BOY SCOUTS

NEW WESTERN SCOUT LEADER

Fresh from his duties overseas, where, as director of athletics for the American expeditionary forces, he did conspicuous work in guiding the recreational activities of millions of doughboys, E. S. DeGroot, noted physical educator, joint author of the California public school physical education law, one of the organizers of the Playgrounds Association of America, organizer and director for eight years of Chicago's public recreation centers and considered an authority on physical development the world over, has definitely allied himself with the boy scout movement by accepting the position of scout executive of the Los Angeles council.

Relinquishing a position paying a much higher salary, DeGroot, in consenting to devote himself exclusively to the development of scouting in Los Angeles, offers another example of the high grade of men that are now being attracted to the movement.

DeGroot's advent into the executive phase of scouting will be hailed with enthusiasm by the hundreds of thousands of men and boys now connected with the Boy Scouts of America, for the record that he has built in the field of physical education is one that few men can excel or indeed equal in this country.

CHALLENGE TO THE CHURCHES.

"I became well acquainted in the White mountains this summer with a layman from a large Eastern parish," writes Dr. George Parkin Atwater, in the Witness. "As we climbed Mt. Willard together, he asked, 'What do we need most? Could this church capture the child life?'"

"It might," I replied, "if it would begin to train laymen for work among children, if it understood the meaning of

of the boy scout movement, if it poured its money into training men and women rather than into bricks and mortar; in other words, if it accepted the challenge of the children, as Doctor Gardner so finely puts it, and brought the training of children out of the basement into the chief place in the life of the church."

"Moreover, never forget this: The surest way to the heart and life of the parent is through an interest in the child."

SCOUT'S DAILY GOOD TURNS.

Cleaning of an old graveyard which was an "eyesore" to the town and erecting a town flag and a service flag were the things that a troop of boy scouts in Elizabeth, Pa., did for their community.

Scout Troop No. 43, in Washington, D. C., has a boy scouts' band, which has without cost played day after day for the funds of the Red Cross, sick soldiers, Liberty loans, and also for churches and poorhouses.

WORLD W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

Rosalind, Countess of Carlisle, Pres. World W. C. T. U.

Westminster Abbey, Where World Convention Meetings Will Be Held.

Anna A. Gordon, President W. C. T. U. of America.

In April of the world's convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet in London. The national president of the union in the United States, Miss Anna A. Gordon, and Miss Julia Deane, editor of the official publication of the organization, the Union Signal, will leave our country for England on the steamer Philadelphia, sailing March 29. Miss Gordon, being one of the secretaries of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, finds it necessary to be in London two weeks in advance of the more than two hundred women, national officers, state presidents, organizers and workers of prominence in the union. After the convention has been held Miss Gordon and Miss Deane will begin a tour of the world in the interests of furthering world prohibition, the goal which has been set for the next five years' service.

A jubilee convention was held in St. Louis, Mo., in November, at which rejoicing over the victory of the federal amendment was mingled with planning for the work of the future. The attainment of the chief objective, the prohibitive amendment, has freed the organization energy for extending the many other sorts of welfare work in which it has been engaged and the securing of a million-dollar jubilee fund has provided the means with which to carry out the extensive program that has been laid out. Departmental work will compass world prohibition, Americanization, child welfare, health and morality and scientific temperance instruction.

This world convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in the historic Westminster hall. Rosalind, countess of Carlisle, president of the World's W. C. T. U. and of the British Union, will be hostess to the delegates, among whom will be the president of this state. Plans will be developed to make the wartime experience contribute to the furthering of prohibition in those European countries that had to recognize the value of prohibition in the army, no doubt, as the same experience was utilized in this country to crystallize public sentiment for prohibition.

In the ground the world trip that will follow the convention in London, Miss Gordon and Miss Deane expect to include those new countries that have grown out of the war, countries in which government principles are in process of development, with the hope that they will prove fertile fields for the cultivation of prohibition sentiment.

rules practically make the board a court of appeal only as the assumption of the board will be that if there is no protest or remonstrance in the taxing unit it is admitted that the application for the loan meets the approval of the community. Notice is always given of such application to make the loan and objectors are requested to put their reasons for resisting the application in writing. Where remonstrances are filed a hearing will be held by the board or a representative thereof in the community affected or at the county seat and will eliminate the necessity of taxpayers having to attend at Indianapolis either for or against the petition. This practically eliminates supervision by the tax commissioners unless the taxpayers in the unit affected resist the granting of the order. Taxpayers will assume their responsibilities and if they fail to object to the action of their local officials it will be ordinarily presumed that their officers are acting in accord with their desires. The same rule will apply to tax levies in the September session of the board.

URGES PEOPLE TO FIGHT CATARRH WITH SIMPLE HOME MADE REMEDY

Can Make Pint at Home and Costs Little, Says Leading Druggist of Covington, Ky., Who Has Made
Special Study of Catarrh.

Says: Inflamed Nostrils Invite Influenza

People who say that catarrh is a disease not to be taken seriously are harshly rebuked by a Kentucky druggist who has for years been much interested in the growth of this loathsome, yet altogether too common disease.

He claims that the sore, tender, inflamed membrane of the nostrils and throat is a prolific breeding ground for germs—not only the germs of influenza, but many other kinds as well.

If people would only stop experimenting for two weeks and try a simple remedy made of Mentholized Arcine mixed with enough boiled water to make a full pint, half of the catarrh in this country would be abolished. It's really no joke for people who don't know about this simple recipe to be constantly sniffing and snuffing, blowing and hawking, when all these obnoxious symptoms as well as the foul discharge can be made to disappear in a few days.

Ask for three-quarters of an ounce of Mentholized Arcine—that's all you need and after you have mixed it with enough boiled water to make a pint, gargle the throat twice daily and snuff or spray some up the nostrils, as directed.

The tender nostrils will soon lose their soreness, heal up, and be clean and healthy.

Important Reminder: Just as soon as anyone in the family gets a cold in the head, check it at once with this same medicine.

LADY LARKSPUR

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons

Antoine spoke truly: If there was anything my uncle Bash detested it was a dog, but I reflected that a world-skipping widow who could corral so difficult a subject as my uncle would be quite capable of inspiring him with delight in the canine species. My respect for the woman's powers of persuasion was intensified by this disclosure.

To make sure nothing was required of me until morning, I drove past the house with the army hanging to the footboard. The lower rooms were dark, but lights twinkled through the second-story shutters. My aunt was established on the premises, and her coming and the circumstances of her advent constituted a good joke of which I and not she was the victim. When I reached my quarters in the garage I sat down and laughed until Flynn appeared, frightened by my noisy mirth that had penetrated to his quarters.

I awakened early, rang a bell connecting my rooms with the chauffeur's end of the garage as a warning to the flynn to prepare breakfast, and was dressed when the Irishman came in with the tray. In the absence of a morning paper I clung to him for company.

"I trust you will not be leaving, sorr," he remarked, eyeing my half-packed trunk.

"Very soon, Flynn."

"Then Elsie and I will be going too, sorr. It's most uncomfortable they're making us—Dutch and the rest. That Antoine and his army keep pesterin' us and callin' us Huns. It's most disagreeable we find it, the wife and me."

"Suffer and be strong—that's the watchword! We will hope that Mrs. Bashford is a woman of sound sense and tact who will exert herself to restore peace on her property. When I call to pay my respects and make my adieux I shall speak to her of the situation and vouch for your loyalty. You haven't, I suppose, seen the widow yet—she's probably sleeping late."

"Quite the contrary, sorr. She's been up and around for an hour an' more. She's been all over the place and stopped for a squint at the garage, her and the pup."

"She been here, inspecting the garage?" I asked, glancing at my watch. It was not yet eight o'clock. The banter died out of me; clearly it had been my duty to be on hand to pilot her over the estate, or at least to receive her at the garage. "Just what was the lady's frame of mind—as to things generally. Peeved, was she, over the row last night?"

"Oh, no, sorr; quite cheerful an' friendly. She's ordered a big car from New York and told me it would be coming up to-day and to make a place for it."

Here was news indeed, destroying all my hopes that she meditated only a brief sojourn. The purchase of a machine meant definitely that she would remain for some time, perhaps for the winter. I poured a second cup of coffee, swallowed it, grabbed my hat and stick, and asked enlightenment as to the course taken by Mrs. Bashford when she left the garage.

"She took the lower road, sorr, toward the Sound and stepped off quite brisk-like."

It was the serene of September mornings, and I hurried away, thinking the cloudless blue arch, the twinkling sea, and the crisp air might serve to soften my aunt's displeasure at her hostile reception. From the conservatories I caught a glimpse of a woman on the beach—a slender, agile woman, throwing a ball for the amusement of a fox-terrier. The two were having no end of a good time. She laughed joyfully when the ball fell into her hands and the terrier barked his discomfiture and eagerness for a chance to redeem himself.

Antoine's equivocal statement as to Mrs. Bashford's age was ridiculous. Instead of the middle-aged woman whom I was prepared to meet, here was beyond question a vigorous, healthy being whose every movement spoke for youth and the joy of life. It might, after all, be the maid of whom Antoine had spoken. I reached a low stone wall that separated the lawn from the beach just as she effected a running pick-up of the ball. She turned swiftly and flung it straight at my head. Involuntarily I put up my hand and caught it just as she saw me and cried out—a cry of warning and contrition. I tossed the ball to the dog.

"What must you think of me!" she exclaimed. "I was blinded by the sunlight and I didn't see you—really, I did not!"

"I had no business being in the way," I laughed, noting first her glowing color, her violet eyes—amazingly fine eyes they were—her fair hair with its golden glint, her plain black gown with lawn collar and wristbands. It was her age, however, that roused me to instant speculation. Twenty-five, I decided, was a maximum; more likely she was not more than twenty-two, and if I had been told that eighteen was the total of her years I shouldn't have had the heart to dispute it.

"Bob Singleton," I said and stupidly added, "and you are Mrs. Bashford?" unable for the life of me to avoid turning the statement into an inquiry. "I am your aunt Alice," she said with a smile, putting out her hand. "Down, Rex!" she commanded the dancing terrier; "lie down; school's over now"; whereupon Rex obediently sprawled in the sand and began trying to swallow the ball.

"Wasn't that silly of me to try to kill you the first time we met?" Her eyes danced with merriment. "I didn't know of course that any one was about. But you made a very nice catch of it! I had expected to receive you most formally in the drawing-room, but this really serves very well. That tree down yonder is inviting; suppose we stay out here and talk a bit."

This struck me as the pleasantest thing imaginable, though I was still dazed and my tongue seemed to have died in my mouth. This girl, this wholly charming and delightful young woman, was the monstrous being I had conjectured as the globe-trotting widow who had kidnaped and married my uncle! Not only had she married my uncle Bash and in due course buried him; she had been a widow when she married him. The thing was staggering, bewildering. She was clearly anxious to be friendly, but nothing that I had thought of saying to her fitted the situation.

"In the first place," I finally began, "I must apologize most humbly for the earnest efforts of the servants to murder you last night. Mr. Torrence had promised to let me know when you would reach here, but he must have forgotten it. I had motored to a friend's house to dine and didn't get back until the mischief was done. I'm very sorry."

"Not for the world would I have missed that," she exclaimed with a merry laugh. "It was perfectly delicious! And it was all my fault. I meant to remain a day at Hartford, you know, and send a message to Mr. Torrence from there, but I found that by pushing on I could reach here yesterday. And you know we English always expect strange things to happen in America. I don't understand yet why those people at the gates were so jolly anxious to kill us; but it doesn't matter; you would spoil the joke by explaining it."

However, I did my best—it was a weak attempt—to explain the nervousness of the veteran servants and their display of violence. Her arrival made it likely that we should soon know more about the "parties" whose visits and inquiries had so alarmed Antoine and his comrades. I told her with all the humor I could throw into the recital of the drilling of the bell-hops and of the uncomfortable relations between the Allied forces and the Teutonic minority on the estate.

"It was dear of Mr. Bashford to provide a home for these people; wasn't he really the kindest soul that ever lived?" she said softly.

She gazed wistfully seaward, and I saw the gleam of tears on her long lashes. My uncle had, then, meant something to her! No one, in speech or manner, could have suggested the adventuress less; uncle Bash was a gentleman, a man of esthetic tastes, and the girl was adorable. More remarkable things had happened in the history of love and marriage than that two such persons, meeting in a far corner of the world, would honestly care for each other.

"You stopped at Hartford," I began, breaking a long silence. "You have friends there—?"

"Not one! I had made a pious pilgrimage to Mark Twain's last home at Redding, and hearing that he had lived at Hartford, I came through there to render my fullest homage. He has always been one of my heroes, you know."

"Our introduction is complete," I said reverently. "Let's consider ourselves old friends."

"I rather thought we understand each other," she said in her even, mellow tones. "You know, we had your photograph out East—a very good one, it seems—so I had an idea of what you looked like."

"He was very fond of you. He was very proud that you had come into the war."

"I am glad to hear that; I thought he disapproved of me for refusing to go into business. He offered me a substantial interest before he sold out."

"I know that; but I think he liked you rather better for refusing it. Business with him was merely a means to an end. And it was doubly sad that he should die just when he was free to enjoy the beautiful things he loved."

It was at the tip of my tongue to say that the loss of her companionship was even more grievous; but nothing in her manner invited such a comment. She talked for some time of Uncle Bash's life in the East, of his short illness and quite unexpected death.

"But I'm keeping you," she exclaimed suddenly, jumping down from the wall. "And I must finish my unpacking."

As we walked to the house I answered her questions about the neighborhood, and promised to telephone Torrence immediately of her arrival.

"You will have luncheon with us—or maybe dinner would be better—or both? I shall think you resent my coming if you don't dine at the house every day. Mrs. Farnsworth—my friend and companion—is a very interesting woman. I am sure you will like her."

The information that she was protected in her youthful widowhood by a companion was imparted neatly.

"It was really much nicer, meeting this way," she said, giving me her hand. "We shall expect you at seven."

I found them on the veranda. She came toward me, a slender figure in white. She seemed taller in white; as she took a few steps toward me. I was aware of a stateliness I had missed at the shore. A queenly young person, but as unaffectedly cordial and friendly as in the bright morning sunlight.

"Mrs. Farnsworth, Mr. Singleton." Mrs. Farnsworth was a pleasant-faced, white-haired woman with remarkably fine, dark eyes. If the positions had been changed—if Mrs.

Farnsworth had been my uncle's choice of a wife, the situation would have been much more real. I instantly liked Mrs. Farnsworth. She uttered a few commonplaces in an uncommon place without pausing in her knitting. Mrs. Bashford had been knitting too, and as she sat down she took up her yarn and needles. Her manner of knitting was charming. She knew that I was watching her hands and remarked with a graceful turn of the head:

"For an English boy somewhere! I began by knitting for my brother and cousins, but—her head bent lower—that isn't for me to do any more." Her eyes, turned upon me for a moment, were bright with tears.

It had been years since the house had known a woman's hand, and it was astonishing how humanized it had become in a few hours. The long dining-room, always a bare, for bidding place, had been reduced to cozy proportions by screens, and a small round table replaced the massive, oblong affair that always looked as though it had been built into the house by the carpenters.

"I found those lovely screens in the garret and thought we might as well enjoy them, and that Lang Yao jar you see on the sideboard oughtn't to be hidden in the vault."

"I am sure Uncle Bash would be happy to know you care for these things so much," I said, noting that the white roses she had chosen for the jar—I knew the choice was hers—served to emphasize the deep red of its exquisite glaze.

"I am among the unselect," remarked Mrs. Farnsworth. "When I am told that such things are beautiful I am immediately convinced. I say they are beautiful, and that is enough."

"That has always been enough for me," I replied. "My uncle used to try to interest me, but he gave it up when he found that my pagan soul was aroused by nothing but pottery idols. I am a heathen!"

"I am gratified that you make the admission so frankly," said Mrs. Farnsworth. "I have always been a great admirer of the heathen. But, you know, Mr. Singleton, Alice and I never can agree as to just what a heathen is. All our squabbles have been about that. I am disposed to include all who believe in fairies good, or bad, and persons who honestly believe in signs, omens, and lucky stones, and all who have the receipt of fern-seed and walk invisible—there's Shakespeare for that."

"I think," said Mrs. Bashford soberly, "that I have always believed in witches; and if I keep on believing I shall see one some day. We shall find anything in this world that we believe in hard enough."

County Wood Meeting.

All Republicans in Jackson county who are interested in the nomination of Leonard Wood for the Republican presidential nominee are asked to attend a meeting at the city building Monday night, J. Bordett Little, of Indianapolis, who introduced Mr. Wood at the recent meeting, is expected to be here Monday night to give an address. Organization matters will also be discussed at this time.

Oscar E. Carter, county chairman of Wood Organization.

Forage Crops Save Money in Producing Pork.

"Forage crops will save 10 to 20 percent of grain in hog feeding; lessen farm labor, as the hogs harvest the crop, and scatter the manure evenly over the field; help to keep the hogs free of worms and other parasites; provide opportunity for exercise—an essential to vigor, health and rapid growth; increase the rate of gain, and lower the cost of gain 10 to 20 percent," according to bulletin 66 published by the Purdue Extension Department at LaFayette.

Ordinarily red clover is one of the best forage crops for hogs, but the supply of red clover in Indiana is limited this year. It's none too early to make plans and buy the seed that will be needed for a substitute forage for red clover. The margin of profit in producing hogs is small at the present time. The 10 to 20 percent reduction in the cost of producing pork due to the use of good forage may easily mean the difference between profit and loss on Indiana's hog business this year.

A combination of Dwarf Essex rape, oats and alsike or red clover is used by many of Indiana's foremost pork producers. It makes an excellent hog forage that is available early in the spring. Ground is prepared as for oats and the crop seeded as early as the soil will permit. Four pecks of oats, four to five pounds of Dwarf Essex rape and three to four pounds of red clover or two or three pounds of alsike are usually seeded per acre. The oats may be drilled and the rape and clover seeded with a hand seeder.

Have the seed on hand so that it can be seeded as early in the spring as the weather and soil conditions will permit.

This combination is ready to pasture when the growth is six to eight inches high. The oats is available first and makes fairly good forage until it begins to joint and head. The rape comes on during June and July and the alsike or red clover, as the case may be, during late summer and fall. Best results are secured when the forage is not over-grazed.

Five doctors and 11 other workers of the American Red Cross Commission remain in middle Siberia to distribute the large amounts of relief supplies previously shipped into the interior. Much of the work was halted and immediate evacuation of several warehouses made necessary through the war between the various factions.

American Red Cross workers at Chita supplied clothing for 3,000 miners, 5,000 railway employees and their families, 3,000 Austro-German prisoners and approximately 1,000 civilians during the recent particularly bitter cold of the Arctic winter there.
